A real conversation piece

Dogs are something to talk about

Edmond, the high school which practically everyone is talking about, seems to be a wonderful mixture of contradictions.

The stereotyped reputation that has been tagged on the students here is actually quite narrow. One high school in Oklahoma City even had an "Edmond Day." The students dressed "preppy" and played the part of a socialite.

However our student body is made up of much more than "preps". Walking through the halls, you will see an assortment of individuals ranging from "cowboy" to "freak", and a dichotomy of several looks. There are "prep-cow-boys," "surfer-punks," "jock-collegiates" and "studious-freaks." The mixtures seem endless.

On closer inspection, you will find that not only are these people a mixed bag of styles, but represent a cross-section of America.

The town of Edmond is a mixture of families from all over the USA. Many of these families did not grow up in Edmond, but have moved here recently.

Obviously our reputation for excellence in the educational field is well known. Newcomers to this part of Oklahoma choose our town, and consequently our school, because of its outstanding educational record. Each year we have several National Merit Scholarship finalists.

Students, however, like our school for quite different reasons. Diane Durkett, Junior, expresses it best, "I think the neatest thing about this school is the school spirit. Everyone seems to have a lot of pride in the school. I love it!" Diane moved to Edmond from Washington.

Junior Leslie Roberts just moved here from Virginia where she attended a school with an enrollment of 4,500. "Edmond was a welcomed change for me," says Leslie "my old school had very little school spirit."

All this talk of "pride" and "spirit" has to be based on something more than just an outstanding athletic program. It goes much further than that.

A SURVEY OF THE HIGH SCHOOL parking lot reveals that students from all over the United States have moved to Edmond with their families.

Our mixture of the "old" and "new" people of Edmond has made it a strong community. We see education as an equal distribution of excellence in academics, music, and the arts. We also offer a wide selection of after-school activities.

It is no wonder that we are talked about by so many people. Colleges from all over the United States court our students in hopes of enticing them to pursue higher education at their institutions.

Even at a young age, Edmond youth are recruited for their outstanding athletic, academic, and leadership abilities to OU and OSU with summer camp programs and clinics.

Some students from Edmond have been fortunate enough to receive letters of acceptance from school with the prestige of Harvard or Yale.

It comes as no surprise to most people who really know us that we are much more than what one sees at first glance. Wherever people talk about excellence, the name "Edmond" seems to pop up, and it is not hard to hear the respect in their voices as they say "Edmond, High School, it's a real conversation piece!"

Busy signal prompts new phone hookup

Constantly occupied lines demanded that the administration install a new telephone system. The Multi-Button Electronic Telephone Set provided the faculty with many options, as well as a few frustrations. Once the new system was mastered, however, its benefits were noticeable and appreciated.

Males "marooned" by spirit club

The traditional EHS Pep Club took on a new dimension with the addition of two new members. Tom Calvin and Brad Michaels joined the previously all-girl club and took on the challenge of being the first male members.

Tom proved beyond a shadow of a doubt that he was spirited at the homecoming assembly, where he won the "Super Fan" award. He compered for the award by dressing in maroon and gray from head to toe. He carried out his "Super Fan" duties by dressing up for and cheering at every game.

Brad Michaels, a new member to Edmond, was appointed by the student council as the first traditional mascot. He was responsible for raising spirit and exciting the sports spectators with his outstanding gymnastic ability.

Both boys contributed a lot to the Pep Club, as well as to the student body as a whole. Their display of energy and spirit encouraged others to support the high school organizations with a sense of pride that was new and very welcome.

Spirit chain symbolizes physical bond

Because of the rapid growth of the Edmond community, our secondary school has been forced to reside in two separate buildings.

Despite this physical separation, the two groups of students share many common traits. In an attempt to bridge the gap between the two buildings, the students joined forces to create a "spirit chain." The high school's 2,000 paper links were joined with the mid-high's astounding 26,000 links to form a maroon and gray chain that was long enough to connect the two schools, adding a physical bond to the already strong emotional one.

SYMBOLIZING AMNESTY between the mid-high and the highschool, Senior Class President Rick Dearborn links the two schools' spirit chains into one.

DRAVELY GOING where no male has ever gone before, Tom Calvin tolerates the embarrassment of a shower cap, a "bulldog" nose and whiskers to become the first male member of Pep Club. Begging Molly Dressler for her autograph, Tom fills up his "E" as one of the requirements for new members.

ALTHOUGH THE NEW PHONE HOOK-UP provided its users with a lot more ease and convenience, some students still found the standard pay phone to be the easiest way to be sure of having a line. Steve Dums converses, icy in hand, on the school pay phone.

Diversity reigns

Talk about different

Colorful contrasts and delightful contradictions made Edmond High School an interesting and exciting place to attend classes and initiate friendships. From the many different models of cars in the parking lot to the variety of academic subjects offered, the myriad of facers that composed the school were apparent. A prime example of this diversity was found in the varied characters of the student body.

"Punks" set themselves apart with radical haircuts and clothes that rebelled popular fashions. "Kickers" two-stepped through the year in scuffed boots and Wrangler's, and "Preps" followed the rules of tradition in Fair Isle sweaters and plaid skirts, shirts, and toothbrushes. "Jocks" were infamous for their swaggering strides and well toned, ogie bodies, and "surfer types" cruised through the halls in OP's and army fatigues.

Then there were those confused, or perhaps simply unique individuals, that chose to combine several stereotypes. Preppy cowboys in Polos and Tony Lomas and surfer-jocks in rubber thongs and rippling muscles were common, just to name a few.

Interests, too, were a point of contrast among students. Some spent their time away from school working on school related activities, others slept and watched TV, and still others pursued ambitious hobbies such as horse showing and ballet and jazz dancing.

The mixture of personalities contributing ideas and aiding in the development of their classes provided the school with a unique and refreshing image. Oblivious to conformity and relaxed about individuality, we were able to successfully mesh all our personalities into one distinctive class.

LOOK DEEPLY INTO THEIR EYES. You can almost feel the New Wave emotion sweeping you up. It speaks to you in the curve of their faces and demands attention in their insurgent clothes. There is a tangible difference in their attitudes and principles. They believe in themselves and stand firmly by their convictions. People call them "Punks" but they are merely two teenagers, Mark Diehler and Margaret Caldwell, who know what they like, not what others want them to like.

ATHLETIC TRAINING takes several forms. Donald Clark practices his diving form with the help of a trampoline. Tammy Carr helps spot during the workout.

SPONSORS ENJOY CLUB TRIPS almost as much as students. Abe Warren gives a smile of satisfaction as he accompanies FFA members on a boat ride down the Potomac in Washington D.C.

LAUGHING FILLS THE AIR during the Howdy Week picnic. Melinda Murray takes a break from volleyball to catch her breath and sip a soft drink.

Girl two: I don't know. I got off last week to go to the J.U.G. party, and next week's the Pep Club Dance. I'm not going to miss that!

Girl one: Yeah, I know what you mean. I've been asking off a lot lately, too. Last weekend I went out with David. What a disappointment! I had the worst time of my whole life. I would have rather been at work! Believe me, that's one boy I'll never go out with again. Well, I guess I'd better go. I'm shopping for a formal for the dance. Have you gotten yours yet?

Students enjoy spare moments

Everyone will agree that school and all its demands kept us more than busy. As limited and precious as our time was, however, we all managed to save a little for "doing our own thing." The activities we chose were as diversified as the people choosing them.

For many, extra hours were spent earning money. Fast food franchises, clothing stores, and novelty shops employed a large part of the student body. Students were offered the opportunity to pursue their vocations through a work permit, in which they were released from school an hour early in order to go to work.

Spending money also occupied a lot of our time. Movies, concerts, video arcades and restaurants filled our hours and emptied our pockets. Other pastimes that we found entertaining and enjoyable were skateboarding, skiing, watching video tapes, going to parties, and going "uptown" and out to the "Rat Roads." These roads were in undeveloped additions where kids from all over Oklahoma City and Edmond got together to have a good time.

One pastime activity was found to be inevitable. Almost everyone at one time or another indulged in "crashing." Sleep, after all, was important if we wanted to keep up our strength for all the things that we filled our busy lives with.

THE HIGH SCHOOL PARKING LOT serves as a suitable surface for John Ginslerblum to practice "hanging ten."

For many people, watching video films is a popular pastime. It is often more convenient than going to the movies.

HACKY SACK IS A SPORT

Hacky sack is a sport that requires a lot of skill and coordination. It is often played in schools and at community events.

Riches mined in Oklahoma heartland

Just as the jewels sparkle in Alabam's crown, so Edmond sparkles with the treasures of our natural resources.

The beauty of the ruby is outshown only by the wonder of our youth. They excel in every activity, and explore the far reaches of human experience. Edmond teens soar over fences on four-legged creatures and they harvest the fruit of the earth. We have students who sky dive, hang glide, test the limits of high adventure in Explorer Posts, model, advance scientific theories, and ride round up. We do it all.

In a sultry voice with just a hint of snobbishness, Edmond can boast of her "black gold" money, the utter substance of our lives.

Dark, mysterious, emerald green is exemplified through new wheat swaying in the Oklahoma wind.

We have it all, even the cutting edge of a diamond. It's our very own college CSU.

Our resources are deep and far-reaching, they are unique, they are extraordinary. We are living in the bosom of dynamite and we should be proud.

THE WORLD DEPENDS ON THIS SIMPLE MACHINE. We have gone so far for little more than the oil that gain this oil well products. Many Edmond families have this to thank for their wealth.

Shining spirit ignites glows

The overwhelming exuberance of the student body was apparent at the very first pep assembly. Senior initiated spirit with their participation in chants and cheers, and the juniors were quick to follow their example. We fused together in support of the Bulldogs, and the bond we created passed the rest of time, carrying us through the year as one massive force.

All that we did in support of our school was done with pride and spirit. We backed our teams through football, basketball, baseball, and wrestling seasons, participated eagerly in student council activities, and worked diligently on our individual club projects. We made our devotion obvious to everyone by adorning our cars with shoe polish in sayings such as "Bulldog Power," "Awesome 'Dogs," and "I love EHS." After the heartbreaking loss against Midwest City, the doors to the gym foyer met the football players with the encouraging words "we still love you Bulldogs!"

Our spirit was the source of the creation of a new tradition. Student Council appointed Brad Michael as the first traditional mascot, an honor that he will pass down to future generations. We also carried on the traditions that we inherited with the respect they deserved. We attended the homecoming bonfire, decorated the football players' lockers for the last home game, and welcomed the juniors with "Howdy Week" with a sense of spirit that was familiar and expected.

JUNIORS SPELL IT OUT They organized enthusiasm, unity, glow, and sports items to glow assembly in preparation for the homecoming "Howdy Week" event.

Awesome events signal homecoming

I was walking down the hall at about 2:15 when one of the school bus drivers stopped me and asked "What's going on here?" His eyes went from my "Space Ace" party hat to my punk rock sunglasses and to my necklace of maroon and gray streamers. The halls were cluttered with streamers, bits of signs and a few balloons still lingered on the lockers.

"Homecoming" was my simple reply.

"Oh, that explains a lot," was his knowing response.

Walking on, I realized just how special Homecoming really is here at the high school.

The clubs worked for weeks on end to turn out the most smashing floats. Both juniors and seniors concentrated keeping their phenomenal float plans a "secret."

Sponsors of both classes had their hands full trying to keep everything organized and under control.

Teachers were at their wits' end as Homecoming enthusiasm often pushed them into considering mass murder.

Yellow flames stretched their wicked tongues up through the night air, dry wood crackled and gave out quick "snaps" from the heat. Teenagers stood around the traditional bonfire preparing for the "burning of the knights" less than 24 hours away.

Junior-Senior rivalry was never so stiff as it was during the day of homecoming. Gallons of paint, miles of streamers, and hordes of balloons were used in the hall competition.

Third hour classes racked their brains for the most unique door decoration. Mr. Rex Tomlinson's third hour flaunted first place with an enormous bulldog face and mouth.

Tremendous effort was spent on decorations for the gymnasium in yet another junior-senior competition. The seniors came through with flying colors as they won the gym contest.

Later that afternoon, the entire student body turned out to watch and take part in the homecoming parade. This special occasion provided the opportunity for Edmond to see its high school in action.

"Blood makes the grass grow! Blood makes the grass grow!" the steady chant came across the football field at the Homecoming game against Northwest Cassen. The stands were filled as bulldog fans crawled out of the woodwork to watch Edmond whip the Knights.

After the football game, students flocked to the Victory dance in the school cafeteria or to their own private parties. The Homecoming spirit was still surging strong!

"It is one of the few times a year," says Mrs. Helen Peters, "the student body can get together for a week-long activity. It builds unity and stronger school support."

Homecoming, it truly is an incredibly special experience for juniors and seniors alike!!

Going to city — for fun and frolic

We chose Edmond as our home for a number of reasons. Its high academics appealed to some, while others were attracted by its small town charm. This charm, however, included a lot of low-keyed days and quiet nights. For this reason, those of us looking for excitement could often be found commuting to Oklahoma City for our entertainment.

The variety of restaurants lured many Edmondites into the city, where they took their pick from a long line of Asian, European, Mexican, and traditional American specialties.

Movies tempted others down the Broadway Extension. The city offered a choice of twelve theaters, which left Edmond's one nearly out of the running.

Shoppers headed for the city to take advantage of the many malls and shopping centers, including the new Quail Springs Mall, only 15 minutes away.

Night life abounded in Oklahoma City. Quicksilvers, a discotheque, was a popular place for those of us over 18, and Stampede's, with its mechanical bull and live country music, enabled us to pass an evening in an enjoyable way.

No matter how much time we spent in the city, however, Edmond was our home. Eventually, that's where we ended up. It was apparently worth the extra effort of a few minutes travel to live in a small, thriving community where standards were high and life was peaceful and uncomplicated.

Concert scenes excite and delight

Long lines, pushing and shoving, and the relief of finding a seat, that's the way it was when audiences and performers gathered for the first time in the concert hall.

Concerts have become one of the most popular forms of entertainment in the world, and the excitement of the moment is what makes them so special.

With a history of over 100 years, the concert has become a tradition. Artists perform live, and the audience experiences the music in a way that no recording can ever match. The energy and excitement of a live performance is what makes it so special.

The concert is a unique experience, and it's one that everyone should have at least once in their life. It's a chance to see your favorite artists perform live, and to experience the magic of a live performance.

There's nothing like the feeling of being part of a crowd, and the excitement of a live performance. It's a moment that you'll never forget, and it's one that everyone should have at least once in their life.

Communications — more than just talk

When we think of communication, one main vision comes to mind: that of people talking. A little analysis of the word and its meanings, however, provides us with a more multi-dimensional view.

Communication can be defined as the "interchange of thoughts or ideas." That definition includes a lot more than simply conversing. Emotions express themselves in paintings, books, music, and even simple actions in which words are never spoken. How many times have we ever spoken with Mark Twain or William Shakespeare? Their thoughts and opinions on life, death, love, and religion are known through the world, recorded for all time in their literature.

The nation expresses itself in 1982 and 1983 in a number of delightful and entertaining ways. Movies were, for the first time in several years, worth going to see, and a new and exciting list of records provided us with one of the best years of listening in a long time.

The Go-go's, a refreshingly all-girl group, brought a new, light sound to radio listening with their album, Vacation. John Cougar, with the release of American Fool, excited the charts and teenagers all over America. Willie Nelson released Always On My Mind, an album that held true to the expected excellence of his country music. Pat Benatar sang her way to fame with the release of Get Nervous, which featured the already popular "Shadows of the Night."

Movie after movie, we were pleasantly surprised at the variety and excellence of the selections available. From "The Toy", a roaringly funny comedy with Richard Pryor and Jackie Gleason, to the sentimental love story "An Officer and a Gentleman", starring Richard Gere and Debra Winger, the movies we saw were entertaining and full of life and energy.

Another important happening in the movie industry was the production of "part three" movies. "Superman," "Friday the Thirteenth," "Halloween," and "Rocky" are among those with third-time sequels. Other sequels were anticipated for movies such as "Star Wars" and "Jaws."

How-to books were popular reading material. With the aide of a book we learned how to talk like a Valley Girl (The Totally Awesome Val Guide), how to dress like a Preppy (The Official Preppy Handbook), how not to dress like a Preppy (The I-Hate-Preppy Handbook), and how to be a Real Man (Real Men Don't Eat Quiche).

Stephen King continued to keep us up at night reading with fascination (and sometimes horror) his intriguing science fiction. Cujo, The Stand, and Firestarter were among those Stephen King books most enjoyed.

"Creepshow," his unique movie that also came out in the form of a comic book, provided us with hours of hair-raising, spine-chilling enjoyment.

Danielle Steele was another author that provided us with entertaining reading. The Promise, although a few years old, remained one of the most popular of her touching romances.

Glaning back over this array of literature we recall many things about our high school years. The songs that made us dance and sing, the movies that touched us, made us cry and laugh, and the books that were good enough to be keepers. The next day, and yet again, all of these represent people who were this, we said our society held at the time we were at work. And as we look back, our thoughts are reminded of the time when we were young, and yes, some who we were a part of and proud of 1981.

Fashion trends conjure up memories

Fashion tends to mark the nation's period of time behind a unique expression of that era. It is not just a matter of what is popular, but what is unique to that time.

The fads and fashions that carried the 52th school year of this well-known school, when remembered, bring to mind a youth and good times.

Probably one of the most popular fashions of the 50s was the "poodle" haircut. The girls of the 50s were known for their "poodle" hair, which was a short, curly style. Among the fads of fads, headbands were of the style. Worn as the fad of the 50s, headbands were a popular look for girls of that time. They were often worn with a headband, which was a popular look for girls of that time.

Friendship beads were another fad that was popular in the 50s. They were often worn as a symbol of friendship, and were a popular look for girls of that time. They were often worn as a symbol of friendship, and were a popular look for girls of that time.

Prices rise but spirits stay high

Highschool days are basically remembered as times of levity, times very sparse in straight faces and overflowing with good times. There were, however, a few subjects worth a moment of sober contemplation.

The infamous "Tylenol scare," in October of 1982, was definitely one of these. Cyanide poisoning in a bottle of Extra-strength capsules resulted in the banishment of millions of bottles of the product from the shelves of grocery and drug stores. The extra-strength capsules reappeared early in 1983 in "tamper-resistant" bottles, a requirement of the FDA.

Social Security was another serious topic of working highschool students throughout the nation. As the American population's percentage of people over 65 rose, working teens found sizeable chunks of each paycheck going to support the elderly. But even with our contributions, the Social Security program was scraping the bottom of the barrel for funds. We found ourselves wondering what would happen by the year 2030, when we, along with the majority of the United States population, would be over 65.

Lay-offs and job shortages resulted in record-breaking lines at unemployment offices. Inflation, unemployment percentages, and the general state of economic havoc were commonly compared to the great depression of the 1930's.

Colleges did not escape the syndrome of rising prices. Colleges in the state of Oklahoma raised the tuition fees as much as 25%, while at the same time President Reagan cut funds for college grants and colleges substantially.

All that happened in 1982 and 1983 was not unfavorable, however. A bill was proposed that allowed for a four-day school week in place of the present five-day schedule. Classes would be lengthened ten minutes each. This change would result in a decrease in gas used by school busses and in energy used to heat, cool, and light buildings. The state legislature approved the bill, leaving the final decision whether or not to make the change up to the individual districts.

George Nigh, elected as governor in Oklahoma in 1982, was the first governor to be elected for more than one term in the history of the state.

An addition to the Oklahoma Christian College campus came in the form of a building honoring the greatness of our nation. "Enterprise Square" was built as a museum to provide an educational look into the background of America.

As we glance back at the events that composed our highschool years and the history that we created at that time in our lives, we realize that good or bad, these happenings gave us insight, strength, and the basis for maturing into responsible, concerned adults.

'Cream of the crop' realize goals

Remember that girl on the front row that always had her English assignment or the boy in Government that actually studied for and made an A on the semester test? That constant struggle for perfection, the long hours of study, the impeccable organization, and the unending dedication towards the ultimate goal of straight A's... where did it lead? For hard working seniors who earned a 4.0 grade average based on seven semesters of highschool, the answer was obvious. These zealous few earned one of the most admired and prestigious of all achievements: that of valedictorian. Those who managed to breeze through with only one D to about 4 A's were named salutatorian. All grades for solid subjects were averaged, including any repeated courses. Presented here are Edmond Memorial High School's cream of the 1982-83 academic crop: the Magna Cum Laude.

Mr. & Ms. EMHS elected by students

Each year a senior boy and a senior girl are elected Mr. and Ms. EMHS by their junior and senior classmates. Every third hour all nominating boys and girls are given the number of the candidate they wish to vote for. The number is placed in a box and during lunch and after lunch each student has a chance to vote for the candidate of their choice. These couples are then our attendants, while the boy and girl with the most votes receive the title of Mr. and Ms. EMHS. served as Mr. and Ms. EMHS of 1984-85.

Edmond runners once again take traditional state championship

Tradition, which is a part of Edmond Cross Country, has been a tradition, and this year was no exception. Year after year Edmond Cross Country brings home the state 4-A cross country title.

The varsity team went against many tough teams this year. Norman, Moore, and Jenks always give Edmond runners trouble, but Edmond prevailed through whatever was dished out to them.

Running an average of ten miles daily beginning August 10, the team put a lot of miles in and a lot of band-aids on. Whether we realized it or not, at the time, it had to have done some good. The girls varsity team, consisting of Seniors Dee Devoe and Camile Baldwin, was exceptionally awesome. The boys team, headed up by Dai Nguyen and Craig Thatcher performed in the winning fashion Edmond is known for.

Both the girls and the boys teams headed into the state Finals with several very strong runners. The only athletes who had the experience of the state. Chances were that other more experienced teams would out perform the young Edmond runners.

It was very tough but both the girls and boys teams won their respected State Team Titles. This marked the fourth consecutive year for the boys team, and the fourth in the last six years for the girls.

"The cross-country athletes worked hard and long all season, being the underdog in Class 4A, but as always the incredible dogs came through with the Class 4A state title for the fourth year in a row."

Andy Selkel

"People really didn't think we were in the running for the State Title but the guys' pushed each other and made each runner realize what their own individual potential was. We've worked hard all season and it has payed off for the entire team."

Jeff Crouch

"The team, the coaches, and the fans pull together and that's one of the reasons we win our games!"

Doug Desherow

"We had a successful year due to the exceptional job of the coaches and the Seniors showed us how to win. Hopefully it will carry on to next season. The year went awfully fast because we enjoyed it so much and we're sorry it had to end but we'll be back."

Jeff Matthews

"We could lose a game but, we still are winners because of our spirit."

Dan Gordon

"We had a successful year thanks to the leadership of the Seniors."

Dan Loyd

"My Senior year was the most enjoyable year I've experienced as a football player. I'm glad we made it to the play-offs, but I wish we could've gone farther. I enjoyed playing with my teammates and I wish it didn't have to end so soon."

Season sparks spirit spunk, superiority, craving for success

Each year football season brings a certain type of excitement which generates an electricity that can be felt among the students and faculty. The season sparks spirit throughout the school creating a type of bond between individuals and classes.

Edmond is known for its wild pep assemblies, this year we had the greatest ones of all time. The cheerleaders and pom pom squad did an outstanding job lifting spirits and creating excitement.

The team started off the season in its classic styled defeating U.S. Grant 27-0. From there Norman trotted into Dog territory and received a swift 13-3 kick from a maturing Edmond team. Putman City took it on the chin when they lost 30-12.

Following great wins over three fine teams, Edmond was ranked number one in four of the five polls. The dogs then come face to face with the only other team ranked number one in the state. Mid West City, which has always given Edmond a certain degree of trouble, had a rough team again this year and after a great game they came away with a 10-26 win over Edmond.

The fifth game of the season at John Marshall proved to be a frightening one for Edmond coaches and fans. When Senior quarterback Doug Desherow was injured and was believed to have a serious injury, many felt this would spell disaster for the team and for Desherow. But, after some treatments Doug was allowed to start the next week against N.W. Classen before a large homecoming crowd. The crowd was fired up and ready for a great game. All were pleased by the teams 13-0 win over the troubled N.W. Classen team.

The "Dogs" concluded their regular season with a win over Del City, putting them into the playoffs. They faced a much improved Norman team in the first round of the playoffs, losing a heartbreaker. The fans were somewhat disappointed when leaving the field, but only temporarily. Looking back on the season, many outstanding moments will be remembered and never forgotten.

"We've really pulled together this year and we've become a better team."

Clark Richey

"The team and fan spirit has really helped us out, they've pulled us through in tough times."

Jim Tero

"I feel like the senior leadership this year has really set a good example for the juniors and sophs, and given Edmond a winning name."

Truman Coe

"I think with all the different personalities we have finally become a unit. We get a lot of support that is really appreciated. It's been a great year we've had great coaches. I know when next fall rolls around there is gonna be an empty feeling for a lot of Seniors."

Tom McGivney

"My Senior football year has been the best year I've ever had. Even though we didn't make it as far as we would've liked to, I think the people I was associated with and the kind of team that we had, that we should have gone all the way. Then again, satisfaction isn't everything, but it's close."

Scott Miles

"The coaches care about the players even if we lost the game they were still proud of us."

Rob Hirsch

"We had a really good team this year and a bunch of great Seniors. I wish we could have gone further in the play-offs, but all of the Juniors are going to work especially hard for next season."

Mark Flynn

"We had a very successful season. We got along well but we did not get to go as far as we wanted, yet we accomplished a lot of high goals."

Lady Dogs do well despite youth and inexperience.

This year the Lady Bulldogs completed their season with a 10-9 record. This record was good enough to give them the second place ranking in the Mid-State conference. The girls performed well against many tough teams such as Purman City West and Western Heights, two teams which have been known for their outstanding all around play.

Practicing daily for an hour and a half, the girls sacrificed much of their time that certainly could have been used for other activities which were a little less time consuming or maybe a lot less strenuous. Several of the players even spent most of their summer vacation playing summer league.

Headed up by four year starter Dee Gerlach, the team posted an outstanding win over a strong Enid team by a score of 16-10, taking third in the Guthrie Tournament. Other returning Seniors who performed well for the team through out the season were Lisa Carroll and Angie Chase.

The girls never really received the recognition they deserved even though they put in many tireless hours. They really did a fine job this season with the young team they had and will continue to improve year after year.

Close game ends bid for top title in State playoffs.

Edmond basketball has been one of the more publicized sports at our school in recent years. Seventh year coach Mike de la Garza along with Coach Chris White has built a program second to no other team in our state.

Basketball has been growing in interest in Oklahoma and in recent years our state has been producing some outstanding players. Most of this growth is due to coaches who develop players at a younger age and bring out the enjoyment in the sport.

The 1983 season opened for the 'Dogs at North West Classen, the Knights were defending state champs headed up by pre-season all American Darrell Kennedy. Receiving much publicity due to the return of Kennedy, the Knights were built up to be unbearable. Coach Mike de la Garza felt that in order to beat NWS they would have to shut down Kennedy, so he put senior Bob Horn to the task of slowing Kennedy. Horn ended up with 31 points and set on a course he was to follow throughout the season.

Despite Horn's outstanding game Edmond went down in defeat 79-68. Edmond would do much improving early on in the season and pull within the top ten and remain there. Game after game Edmond polished off its high powered offense and began looking like the great team it really was.

They performed well throughout the McGuinness Tournament and faced NWC in the finals. Although the game remained close, Edmond eventually took second in the tournament.

In 1983 several players played up to All-State potential. Brian Sanders played the role of leadership throughout the season. Senior Brett Bell moved in this year and brought depth to the guard position, allowing other players to score. Brett has become famous for his remarkable ball handling ability that kept opponents confused.

The team stayed within the top ten throughout most of the season. The climaxing moment for the team was defeating Norman and winning a place in the state tournament.

The caravans headed down the turnpike to Tulsa to the Oral Roberts campus where the eight best teams in the state met to decide which was the best 5A team.

However, Edmond's bid for a first ever state championship fell short as Tulsa Edison came from behind to rip the Dogs 52-50.

Girls team reaches for Top Ten Ratings and a winning year season

The last few years Edmond has not been receiving much notoriety for the girls basketball program. Teams would struggle through their seasons hoping that they would at least break 500 average. That is not nearly the story this year though. Their season opened with a win and believe it or not, it just improved. They played to a 6 and 1 record previous to the Christmas break and hopes were set high for the rest of the season. They faced rough opponents as the season progressed, and more work was put in hopes of a State title. A feeling which hasn't been felt in Edmond in some time. One of their biggest challenges was going against a strong Putnam City North team, which was ranked #2 in the state by one point. They won the Putnam City West tournament defeating Choctaw 51-29. They took second in the Lindsay tournament losing a close one to Yukon by 2. They finally gained recognition when they broke into the top ten ratings, where they remained throughout the season. All the hard work payed off as they gained much deserved recognition and respect from their opponents.

"We've worked hard. Next year we should have a good team and I hope we do just as well."

Kevin Freeman throws the opposing wrestler to his back.

Manhandling his opponent, Alan Lipps thrusts his man into a dangerous hold.

Known for long, and intense hours of grueling training, wrestlers pride themselves in the fine conditioning of their bodies. They also pride themselves in the unbelievable extents to which they push their bodies, hoping that in the long run it will pay off in a meet or tournament. Physical condition plays such a vital role in wrestling, equally as important as physical conditioning in mental stamina. They work on training their mind to overcome pain and exhaustion and to make their mind control their body. This all paid off early in the season for them when they broke a long 20 year losing streak beating the strong Ponca City team 33-27.

Edmond was ranked within the top four throughout the season. All the hard work showed as Edmond defeated many outstanding teams. They won the Anadarko Tournament, beat rival Purnam City North, and placed two champions in the Geary Tournaments, one of the state's oldest and more respected tournaments.

Four returning seniors started and aided in bringing stability to the very young team in which six to eight sophomores started each meet. Looking down the road gives Coach Graham extreme satisfaction in seeing the fine development of young wrestlers.

The four seniors who started each meet were: Mike Hampton, a long time impressive wrestler who returned to defend his state title, Kevin Freeman, defending runner up, performed in top form throughout the season, Alan Lipps placed third last year and helped aid in motivating the team, and Joe Bailey rounds out the four starters. He aided in giving the team experience and depth to the young team.

The Bulldogs success carried into the state tourney where they placed third behind Ponca City and Midwest City. Four individuals placed, including Alan Lipps who placed first at 168 pounds. Others who placed were Mike Hampton, second at 130 pounds, Kevin Freeman, third at 141 pounds, and Dirk Bailew third at 115 pounds.

Do you recognize this man? Have you seen him in the halls? Have you wondered what classroom he belongs in? Well, if you are an athlete you know him. He is Athletic Director Joe Straw. Track team hurdles obstacles; become top runners in state

What has 214 legs, a lot of class, and a lot of fun? The Boys Track Team, that's what! Little recognition goes to the tracksters each year, but to Coach Straw, that really is not so important as long as they have a good time, and grow from it. Track has always been a sport for those who are dedicated and willing to shoot for a goal. Track in Edmond has been quite successful. In the past few years, either State Champions or State runners-up.

Seniors included Scott Swanson, Jim Tera, Tod Perry, Jeff Perry, and Brad McInde. They went against tough teams such as Norman and Tulsa Hale. These teams are strong year after year and are always giving Edmond trouble.

Twelve year Coach Straw looked at his cast of five Juniors and needed them to provide depth to his young team. Outstanding members included John Marshall, Ben Wilcox, Gordon Carlin, Klay Roor, Tom Miller, and Phil Slaughter. These performed well and helped the team throughout the season giving their all and helping team spirit.

Track always appeared to be a lot of fun, maybe that is because coaches like Joe Straw make it their goal for the guys to enjoy themselves.

Coach Ron Mitchell took his girls track team out this season looking forward to a great year. Taking several of his All-Star Cross Country runners with him, he began working towards the upcoming season. Coming off a great year, which was winning State Runners-up. Several of the runners on the 1982 team returned this year with hopes of blowing away their opponents in the meets to follow.

Seniors on the team included Judy Williams, Camie Halboe, Angie Davis, who ran the quarter mile, the mile, and hurdles. Angie Thomas ran hurdles, Bridget Felix the quarter mile and hurdles, Camille Baldwin the quarter mile, and Dee DeVoe the two mile.

Come September, mornings arrive much sooner for those willing to sacrifice extra sleep for pride and excellence. This is true in all sports at EHS but for the swimmers this means 5:45 a.m. workouts. Then, after school, hitting the pool once again totaling an average of three and a half hours of practice a day. Seniors Angie Chase and Frank Eckhart head up the cast of young swimmers this year. The team, made up of mainly sophomores and juniors, has many expectations and high hopes this year. Earlier in the season they defeated Norman, the defending State Champions, in a very exciting meet. Many talented juniors fill several gaps on the team due to the lack of seniors. The diving team has been practicing along with the swim team and they have extremely high hopes for this year. All-Stater Donald Clark performed in top fashion all season. Coach Riggs says he is happy about this year and is very excited about the future of swimming in Edmond.

"I feel we work and play well together and we get along. We should take score as far as the team goes. People should attend our games because they are exciting and they aren't hours long like a football game."

Experience, agility keys to success for Edmond's "Spikers"

Second year volleyball coach Peggy McCaw had her sights set on the State Championship for the returning seniors this year. Four of last year's starters returned this year to add experience to the young volleyball team.

Dee Gerlach played as setter, but was also an excellent hitter. Dee's serve made her the team's second highest scorer in 1982. Angie Roberts' jumping ability made her the team's best blocker. Leading the team with points scored on serve, Susan Eschler provided leadership on the young team. Kim Speiser was known for aggressiveness on her defensive play. Joanie Jones rounded out the returning senior starters, and her all around ability helped the team throughout the year.

The girls had a little trouble this year trying to find a regular gym to practice in. They had to alternate between the mid high and high school gyms. This made it considerably difficult to have consistent workouts for the players.

Due to the interest in volleyball among younger girls, volleyball is growing and the teams are able to run more complex offensive structures. This allowed coach McCaw to expand and to give opponents offenses which are difficult to defend, and a defense difficult to score on. Coach McCaw is looking forward to the future of volleyball in Edmond.

"We have five seniors returning this year and we have the proper mental attitude, over all I think our team should take state because of the experience they have. Four of our players went to the Junior Olympics and this gave them a positive edge." Coach Peggy McCaw

"I think volleyball is a very exciting sport and more people should come to our games, it's really a help to the team."

Jeanne Guillotti

"Volleyball is much more exciting and just as challenging as integrating in calculus and with a little help from God I think the team will be totally awesome this year."

Powerful playing nets tennis team top championships

Edmond's powerful boys tennis team has gained well deserved respect the past three years for the record that they have earned of three time defending state champions.

Steve Bickham, the only returning senior for the team, was the #1 singles state champion for two years and has been on the Edmond team four years. Junior Greg Pappas is the defending champ at #2 doubles. Rob Autry, and Paul Carter, are returning juniors who add depth to the already powerful Edmond team.

The 1983 Girls Tennis team was, in all probability, the most talented team Edmond ever had. Experience and continuous practice helped to further develop such talented individuals and superb athletes.

The four year starters who returned this year were Ashley Fleming, who placed third in #1 singles, and Jill Bratcher, who placed third in #2 singles respectively. Becky Rice, defending state champion in #2 doubles was another returning senior. Out her sophomore year because of a broken ankle, but returning her junior year was Tracey Treps, state champ in #1 singles her freshman year.

The boys golf program is consistently promising each year, and with the returning of two experienced and talented seniors, the team for 1983 was no exception. David Seaton, a determined member of the golf team since his sophomore year and a player on the varsity team, returned once again for this past season. Lance Darter is also a returning senior and has seen his second year of golf.

Consistent practices of at least two hours or more at Kickingbird Golf Course aided the team in meeting with their rivals in many tournaments. The Edmond Invitational, the Cedar Valley, Surrey Hills End and the Metro-Plex were the tournaments which lead to state championships.

The girls golf team is growing in prominence and interest throughout the school. The girls team practiced at Kickingbird on a regular basis working on technique and form. Returning starters on the team included: Aime Freund, Torree Seiders, and Ann Green. The girls team plans on working towards State and continuing a great golf tradition in Edmond.

Batters gain large victories and winning edge.

In 1982 the Edmond Bulldogs finished one of their most impressive years ever with an outstanding 35-5 record. Edmond consistently fares well against any team they go up against, but this year they were truly a baseball powerhouse. Victories of 18-2, 13-3, and 15-0, are just a few of the numbers which Edmond put on opposing teams, with scores such as these, who can deny them the recognition they deserve.

For the eighty-two season a number of players received several awards honoring the outstanding ability that each one displayed. This type of recognition is expressed only to those who have worked for it.

The team won the Mid-State Conference Championship, were the Moore and Norman tournaments champions, and were runners-up at the Choctaw tournament. This gives some idea of the fine season they had.

To sum it all up they performed to the utmost of their capabilities and finished the season with something they could be proud of.

Athletes choose all sports royalty

On January 26, 1983, a school-wide assembly was held to recognize the 1982-83 All Sports Royalty Pep Club as co-sponsors of the event, made pillows and decorated the auditorium. Student Council organized the election to determine the winners and announced them at the assembly.

One girl and one boy represented each sport. The nominees were voted on before and after school and during lunch.

All Sports Queen Jill Brocher and her escort Bob Horn represented boys' basketball. Tammy Larsen and Brian Sanders represented girls' basketball.

Boys' track was represented by Carrie Holmboe and Scott Swanson. Judy Williams and Tod Perry represented girls' track.

Jeff Crouch escorted Shelly Self, representing football. Ginger Underwood and Brad Robinson represented baseball.

Girls' cross-country was represented by Camille Baldwin, escorted by Jim Tero. Angie Thomas and John Watson were the boys' cross-country nominees.

Lonny Hanes and Dee Gerlach represented volleyball. Mark Reik escorted Michelle Holland for Tennis.

Boys' golf nominees were Shelly Dowdy and David Seaton. Kelly Decker and Alan Lipps represented wrestling. Katrina Christensen and Troy James represented girls' golf.

Angie Chase and Frank Eckhart were the girls' swimming representatives, and the boys' swimming representatives were Sharon Nobbe and Rex Duhon.

Band awarded all excellent ratings

Struggling through those early morning summer band practices, rehearsing numbers until we thought we would turn blue in the face, and performing at those freezing football games proved that we were a very, very dedicated band!

The year started last summer when we practiced through the blistering heat of August. The band as a whole, practiced from 7 a.m. until 11 a.m. and then broke off to practice in sections. We were also subject to a new change, two new band directors, Al Hultum and Mike Lowery. They really worked us hard but it obviously paid off.

Marching consumed quite a bit of our practice time. We never thought we would finally get it all together, but we proved our talent by receiving all excellent ratings at every marching contest. We also set a record for our school by attending more marching contests than ever before. We also used our marching skills by appearing in various parades. These included the annual fourth of July parade and the homecoming parade. Marching at the Diamond Jubilee parade in Oklahoma City was a good experience and a lot of fun.

WHOEVER SAID all work and no play was almost right. Taking a minute from the marching, Brad Owen and Brock Lutz discuss their solos.

STANDING TALL but tired Debbie Ludwig arches a little extra sleep during a still moment of early band.

BAND COUNCIL Tomorrow is our 50th Anniversary. Back to the Music with Chuck Denver, Brock and Dennis in with Mike Jeff Grindwyr, Teresa, Jumaugh, Middleway, Tracy, John, Mary, Jess, Andrea, Denny, Fum, and Ann. Come to the game.

Performance gets standing ovation

Performing at every home football game provided entertainment for hundreds of spectators. Drum major Chuck Beaver stated, "getting a standing ovation after the closing number of the first game made all the practice we put in worth it."

The flag and rifle corp added color and flash to our overall appearance. The colorguard practiced both mornings and afternoons as well as practicing with the rest of the band. Something new that was started was a winter guard which was a winter competition for rifle and flag corp.

The band also traveled to two away football games at Enid and Putnam City. We played a major role in providing spirit at all pep assemblies and some home basketball games.

We also had a fantastic concert season where we won many honors. Best of all we made strong friendships that made the year a success. Heather Powell summed it up this way, "The friends I made were the reason I thought it was all worthwhile."

IT TAKES A LOT OF DEVOTION to smile at 7:30 in the morning. Kevin Benda, Bass drum player, braves the early morning weather along with his fellow band members. They rehearse for a football game performance.

EARLY RISERS include the band directors since they must have things planned and organized before the band arrives. With a confused look, director A. Hubert over his organized plans while Denise Mahner, curlers, all, lends a helping hand.

Rehearsing until we lost our voices, pleasing large audiences, and gaining new friends were all a big part of our dedication to the Edmond High School Chorus. We made memories that would last in our minds for many years to come. Chorus consisted of four different groups: one hour of girls chorus, two hours of mixed chorus, and the ever popular Act II.

We auditioned for Act II in the spring and found it to be well worth our time. Being talented in the dance and music departments were both required to become a member of Act II. We were asked to perform at many conventions, meetings, and parties. The highlight of our activities was winning first place at the Southwestern State University Jazz Festival in Weatherford. Deini Dailey summed Act II up this way, "It's been a really good experience performing for different kinds of audiences in many different places." (con't on page 66)

The first part of the paper is devoted to the study of the properties of the function $f(x)$ defined by the equation $f(x) = \int_0^x f(t) dt$. It is shown that $f(x)$ is a constant function, and the value of this constant is determined by the initial condition $f(0) = 1$.

In the second part, we consider the problem of finding the maximum value of the function $f(x)$ on the interval $[0, 1]$. It is shown that the maximum value is attained at $x = 0$ and is equal to 1.

Finally, we discuss the question of the uniqueness of the solution to the initial value problem. It is shown that the solution is unique.

Applause keeps chorus humming

We had many opportunities to show off our talent in chorus. Concerts for the public were given at various times during the course of the year. We put on a very special Christmas concert. Singing holiday favorites, lighting candles and staging a nativity scene brought everyone into the Christmas spirit. Chorus received a great honor by winning the sweepstakes recognition in the Little Dixie Choral Contest. We also gained many honors at District and state contests attended in late winter.

Auditioning for All-State Chorus proved to be a very nerve racking experience. Seventeen very talented chorus students were chosen to attend this exciting event. When asked what her feelings about All-State were Michelle Sharp replied, "All-State is a really big honor and a great growing experience. I'm really proud to be a part of it."

Follie's Profits go over the top

Raising money was never a problem for us. This year the home made more money than in years past. This was probably due to the tremendous talent displayed by all the students who were involved in this year. How we had our singing from the Intergroup, Glee Brothers, to a solo from the Glee Club. Broadway was a hit. A huge sale. Money for the school from the production of "The Sound of Music" and donations from the Porterville Art Center.

Preschoolers get stockings, gifts

"Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer" echoed through the room as the preschoolers from Cedarbrook Day Care Center in Esparto, Mr. Clay County, the Key Club members enjoy this day for the Christmas party and stockings filled with toys they received. This was only one of the many service projects Key Club was involved in. Our theme was "Frosting the Fruit With It." To get you in the mood we sponsored a homecoming hot fire, the preschooler Christmas party and our own for brothers and sisters to a basketball game.

Key Club is sponsored by the Kiwanis Club, an organization for the benefit of society, and by Mrs. Jean Adams and Mrs. Betty Tompkins. We had several fund raising projects such as selling "Love Bulldogs" buttons, candy, and helping the Booster Club sell raffle tickets for a Volkswagen.

Besides service projects, we took part in fun activities and we traveled to Six Flags over Texas with the Spanish Club.

We also competed in the volleyball tournament sponsored by Spanish Club.

Thespians travel, perform and speak

So this is what the inside of an ambulance looks like she thought as she rode to Mercy Hospital. As they wheeled her in, her eyes widened at the sight of the emergency room. No, there was no major catastrophe. It was just the Thespians, preparing in one of the many disaster drills at local hospitals. "These drills helped the students be better prepared in case a real disaster occurred," stated Ms. Mary Jane Darley, Thespians sponsor.

Thespians also presented their school plays and musicals. Their programs included the comedy George Washington Slept Here, the musical Oklahoma, and a musical review, The Fiddlers.

They also competed in ten weekly contests throughout the year. Not only did they have performances of their activities, but they also had performances of their own. In Oklahoma, but they also went to New York for a week. According to Courtney Doss, belonging to Thespians Club is a great way to meet a lot of fun and crazy people.

Funds raised to obtain telescope

Celestial observations, volleyball competitions and a lot of fun were in store for all those who joined Science Club. Science Club is an organization for the students with a basic interest in science. We met every other Thursday after school in Mr. Steve Muthis' room to discuss projects and plan events.

Our main goal throughout the year was to raise money for a 29-inch telescope, one of the biggest in Oklahoma. On October fourth, we had a picnic in Firwood Park. After the sun went down, we got out our telescopes and looked at the stars and constellations. The members also helped set up an astronomy Edmond called "An Experience."

Brad Michael, enthusiastic about the money raising projects, said, "We're going to have one of the best telescopes in Oklahoma for one of the best schools in Oklahoma."

Promoting fun and fellowship between students interested in math related fields was the main purpose of the Math Club.

Muri Club sponsored six math league contests throughout the year. Any student interested could enter the contest. The winner, received two free passes to the movies.

We also had a Christmas party where we exchanged gag gifts. Every month other Christmas we donated puzzles to the Banker offering prizes to individuals who could complete them.

Trips to Enterprise Square, U.S.A. and to the Omniplex were among the major projects that we were involved in. Once in March and again in May we hosted guest speakers.

Art Club entry wins door contest

Art students were a little intimidated and a little afraid to walk into their class for a few days in October. They were met not with the usual door but with the yawning mouth-like face of a bulldog. Art Club pulled ahead of everyone entered in the door decorating contest sponsored by Student Council. Creating a first place winner was worth the time and effort the members put into it.

The Art Club Christmas party was a fun-filled evening for the members. After everyone was finished feasting on the goodies the real fun began. Art Club exchanged gifts in the usual manner by playing "Dirty Santa Claus." The game was begun with everyone drawing a number — hoping to get the highest one. The person with number one chose any gift they wanted. Number two was next and they could choose a gift or take the gift number one picked, at which point the first person had to pick a new gift. This went on until everyone had a gift.

Deadlines cause pressure, stress

From the time the tardy bell rang that first day of school until January 28, the Bulldog staff was hard at work. There were pictures to be taken, layouts to be made and copy to be written.

The photographers practically glued their cameras to their sides, each hoping for that "perfect" shot, and copy writers struggled to write about classes they had never taken.

Each of the 30 staff members had their hands full as deadlines loomed near. Check and re-check, type and correct, everything had to be just right.

The pressure never seemed to let up. Yet through it all the staff managed to have a lot of fun and the laughter never ceased.

The Barker Staff really strained at the line to put out the best possible paper every month.

The job of selling ads, typing copy, thinking up informative cutlines, always being "on the scene" for the best possible story and doing it on time was not an easy task.

Each and every person had to be willing to do his share of the work and then some. That was the most important ingredient in putting out a top notch paper.

Top journalists win special honor

The purpose of Journalism Hall of Fame is to recognize students on the yearbook and newspaper staffs who spend a lot of extra time out of school on their projects.

The yearbook and newspaper staffs nominate a designated number of people from their staff and elect the winners on the basis of out-of-school participation and dedication.

Ms. Robin Smith, director of both staffs and teacher of journalism and photography classes stated, "I suggested this award because we needed to begin a hall of fame for journalism in the all school Hall of Fame. Students in music, drama, and art who did outstanding jobs were recognized, but there was no recognition for outstanding journalists."

Students on the Darker and Builders staff put in a lot of extra hours and deserve recognition for their hard work," stated Ms. Smith.

Military Science draws interest

STUCO supports blood drive effort

"Don't get caught with your pants down" read the posters that littered the halls of the high school during blood drive week. Student Council sponsored this event, asking all students to donate a pint of blood.

In addition to the blood drive, STUCO sponsored a number of other activities, including the parade, the dance, and the pre-game bonfire. We set up a candy stripping tree at Christmas time and sponsored a unified quads donation drive. Between third hour classes, we also held a Christmas dinner.

STUCO held the Sullivanville's Day Massacre for the second consecutive year in February.

T-Shirts, M & M's help raise money

Making a 3.5 grade point average, being involved in various activities, and showing leadership as a student were all factors in being considered for membership in National Honor Society. We applied both in the spring and in the winter and anxiously awaited to see if our names were on the list of members posted on Mrs. McBride's door.

By selling M & M's and printing T-shirts for the school, we made the money we needed for activities within our club. We never thought we would see the end of that ever so faithful M & M drive or quit worrying about the money we had to turn in for M & M's that we had spent for our own personal use. Among our most important activities were the free tutoring program, the Mobile Meals contributions, and sponsoring open house for parents. We guided confused mothers and fathers through the building and met many people in the process. One senior NHS member, Jill McCoy, stated, "I think open house is good for the parents to experience a day in their child's life."

Honor Society met once a month to discuss upcoming plans and listen to a speech by the sponsor, Mrs. Jean McBride. Eun Suk Park described Honor Society as a "good club where I can have fun and help others."

Magic Pan serves French Club meal

"Don't forget the French Club meeting after school today!" Madame Elisabeth Sevier would say during class on the first Monday of every month. Usually, all of the 40 members couldn't show up, but most everyone made French Club fun.

We won first place in the car division of the homecoming parade, we ate cookies and ice cream, and we had fun speaking French to each other. This was the Edmond High French Club.

French club had 40 members, more than ever before. We went to the Magic Pan in January and sampled some delicious dessert crepes. We attended Foreign Language Day at Oklahoma University in the spring.

"French Club was really fun. I had a great time riding my horse in the Homecoming Parade!" said Jenni Reese, French Club member.

Latin Club hosts annual toga bash

Wearing Togas, going through initiation and eating big were activities that came with the territory of being a Latin Club member. We started the year off with the infamous Latin initiation. The theme was "Descent to the Underworld." When we finally made our descent, we were subject to eggshells, water, and wet noodles. Blindfolded. We were forced to push basketballs with our noses and ride in teetering wheelbarrows. After all this, we were full-fledged members and could go on to the more appealing aspects of Latin Club.

We involved ourselves in many activities. In September we took a road trip to Oklahoma City to chow down at the Olympic Cafeteria, which serves Greek food. Going to see the movie Dracula proved to be both entertaining and hair-raising. We adopted a Latin Club grandmother and visited her once a month. In November we threw a party in honor of her eighty-fifth birthday and bought her a dress for the occasion. At the Roman Banquet, held in December, we feasted, danced, and entertained our parents.

Monetary votes select Ugly Man

Perhaps the highlight of our activities was the annual Judy Man Contest. Each club sponsored a uniquely man and the student body voted on the face they thought most deserving of the title by donating money to the man of their choice. The winning club received two thirds of the profit while losing club received one third. This money was used to buy the winner a plaque.

TOP MONEY will be the high, Mr. Miller for a few hours. The bank's mortgage is the same.

Business, foreign language popular

Future Business Leaders of America is a youth organization for students who are interested in or enrolled in a business subject. The club gives students opportunities to learn about what goes on in many different business professions. One of FBLA's main objectives is to develop leadership so they can, in the future, may participate in groups more effectively. FBLA President Terri Mays thinks "As a member of FBLA, a person has the chance to see how the business world is operated." Ren Scheuerman, Vice President of FBLA, feels that "Being a member of FBLA is a chance to see how big companies are run, and their criteria for employment." Club sponsor, Mrs. [Name], says, "It helps the students learn leadership activities by participating in various activities at state leadership conference."

We rattled off conversations in German, ate sauerkraut and bratwurst, and learned a lot about the German lifestyle. Of course, we were the German Club. We were not a very large club, but we still managed to have a lot of fun. Once a month we met to discuss plans for various upcoming activities.

Participating in a Christmas dinner with the other foreign languages proved to be both enjoyable and filling. We visited restaurants such as the Edelweiss and the European Delight. The highlight of the year was the annual German Convention where we earned many honors. When asked about this convention the president, Damaris Kaplan, replied, "Winning first place both the band and play production competition was a really rewarding experience." Damaris also designed the German T-shirt, hearing German speakers and communicating in this language made them more aware of the German way of life. German Tim Boggess summed it up this way. "Being in German Club has helped me learn a lot about the German culture."

Peppers cheer our teams to victory

We painted our faces like dogs, donned our shower caps, wore our uniforms inside out and barked our fight song for any one that asked. Crazy? Well, maybe, but mainly we were dedicated, dedicated to our school and to Pep Club. As we blushed and giggled our way through Initiation Day, we found ourselves wondering if it would all be worth it. Why, in fact, did we put ourselves through the embarrassment?

Senior Pep Club Chaplain Liz Giocco summed it up this way: "Having a lot of spirit and pride in our school is one of the most important elements in high school life, and by being a member of Pep Club I can help to boost that spirit." But was the initiation worth it? "Yes, it's such a little thing to go through for such a good cause, especially when the Pep Club dance rolls around!"

In addition to the annual Pep Club dance we did several special things to boost the morale of our athletes and student body. We decorated football players' houses before the Midwest City game, and decorated their rooms and gave each one a "goodie box" for homecoming. But more important than this was the time we spent painting signs before each game and cheering at each event.

The addition of two male members set this year's Pep Club apart as something special. Tom Colvin, one of the two, proved himself worthy of his membership by winning the second annual "Super Fan" contest. Tom was presented this honor at the Homecoming assembly.

Following hopes, designing dreams

To be a writer and to be good at our craft sometimes it seemed like a mystic dream, a fantasy far out of reach. Yet at other times, after reading a newly written creative splurge, the feeling was so tangential, so real that the whole world seemed a more beautiful place. Feelings such as these were often felt by the Writers Anonymous members.

We were students who found an extra thrill in excitement when fashioning a short story, poem, essay, play, or merely thoughts, out on paper. For some it was a hobby, but for others it was a serious venture into a projected career.

We were a special breed. Ours was no ordinary club. We did not spend time with fund raisers or club officers. Attention and energy was focused on the meaning of our club: writing. We shared ideas and experiences with quest speakers. We critiqued each others' creations and worked the rough spots out together. In an effort to seek out and publish truly anonymous writers, we sponsored a school-wide writing contest. The best entries were printed in the literary magazine "Whirlwinds."

Together we challenged our minds and tested the limits of our imagination. We were always working to improve the delicate veins of talent required to become an honestly great writer.

According to Webster's Dictionary, debate means "to discuss a question by considering opposed arguments." Yet to the members of the National Forensic League, debate is much more than that. It is almost a world unto itself.

Hours upon hours were spent in preparation for the next contest. Each debator had to be able to argue both sides of the chosen topic. We had to have the facts and research to back up our case following specific rules and regulations.

Debate is a very serious activity. It requires quick thinking and thorough knowledge of the topic. As members of the NFL, we worked long and hard to perfect our technique, devoting ourselves to our work.

Work, success goal for DECA members

"What? Have a job for nine months?" Many DECA students reacted with this same expression of panic as they learned the requirements for a passing grade in the year-long course. Holding a steady job for nine months seemed at least for some about as desirable as wearing someone else's sweaty gym socks.

Sean Griffey, however, found all the toil and trouble to be only a minor inconvenience when compared to the many rewards of the class. "It's worth the effort you put out to be in it," said Sean, who served as DECA Chaplain. Although he had little time for other things, his year in DECA was well spent and went fast.

DECA, an "on the job" training course, allowed students to receive high school credit while preparing for future business opportunities. "I'm in DECA to see how I would like to do something pertaining to it," said Sara Davenport. Uncertain as to how she would like the business world, Sara was eager for DECA competition.

Competitions for selling and managing were only a few of the projects that the DECA students completed. They also set up award winning booths at Quail Springs Mall, hosted political speakers, and threw a Halloween party for the Clyde Howell School for the Handicapped. They held classroom competitions and tried their hands as merchants by selling "I Love Edmond" T-shirts to the student body. At the end of the year, they attended the state conference and proudly brought home their trophies.

Boosting participation, working as a group, and reaching goals — these objectives possessed DECA students and motivated them to learn and, ultimately, to improve themselves as workers and salespeople. This, perhaps, was the biggest goal of all.

Students attend state conference

Getting elected to a public office is rough in any society. Sometimes, in fact, just getting elected to the society can be quite a challenge. Four girls and one boy from Edmond took the challenge and came out on top. Becky Watson, Nancy Hall, Tami Cook, Heather Powell, and Brad Harris applied to Girl's and Boy's State and were awarded the honor of participating in the organization of a "mini" city, along with 450 girls and 450 boys from all over the nation.

The students were required to appear before the American Legion Auxiliary board, and were then chosen on the basis of those interviews. Most who were interviewed would agree that the experience was about as nerve wracking as riding in a brand new Porsche with Mom behind the wheel.

The girls and boys set up separate parties, which under substitute titles represented the Democratic and Republican parties. They set up state level precincts and elected delegates and formed rules for these precincts.

"I enjoyed it and would go back," stated Brad Harris.

Becky Watson, Nancy Hall, Tami Cook, and Heather Powell stated that the experience was a great one, but a little overwhelming. "It was a great experience, but a little overwhelming," stated Heather Powell. "I would go back, but now that it's over, I'm ready to go back."

Acting, reacting part of debate, drama game plan

They labored for the perfect pantomime and strove for the interpretation. Sweaty palms, flushed faces, cracking voices and flipping stomachs were their most hated enemies, applause their most intimate friend. They were the drama students, and they were definitely a breed apart.

Drama class was a very rewarding. All the hard work and late hours that went in to a play or musical production became more than worth it at the sound of applause, laughter, or even roll-call sniffs and sobbing.

There were a wide variety of courses offered in drama to meet each student's personal interests.

Drama II and III attracted students interested in theatre history, script analysis, pantomime and interpretation. Drama II focused on developing skills in audio techniques, gestures, movement and character analysis. Competitive dramatics offered experience in competitive poetry, prose, oral interpretation and duet acting and Musical productions III developed improved skills in all phases of performance.

It was more than love. It was desire. The desire to know and to be known. To hear and, most importantly, to be heard. This was the element that compelled Debate students. The long standing cliché "Today's youth, tomorrow's leaders" was more than a catchy phrase to them, it was virtually a way of life.

Debate students soon discovered that the class involved much more than merely arguing. Presentations had to be clear, orderly presentations, less than mandatory. It did not require super-intelligence, but it did demand sincere caring for world events.

From Oxford to Oratory, Lincoln Douglas to extemp, the debate student learned and experienced the basic principles of world resolution. From mere black to poignant white, the young adults discussed every angle of world politics. It was high-energy, about a high-energy world.

From their place on the side the command is given. They march quietly across the floor. A silence falls over the crowd. The flag is raised, and a sense of patriotism fills the crowd. This is the response of the crowd each time ROTC makes their entrance.

ROTC is a class for those students looking at a military future. It helps to develop leadership, whether you are commanding or spinning a gun, you still come out with military experience that will help you to succeed through a military future.

You can't teach an old dog new tricks . . . or can you? Many students wondered this as they began a year of a foreign language. Learning to speak all over again from scratch proved to be an aggravating, but none the less rewarding experience.

"I never thought I'd use my French," stated one third year French student. "Then, the summer before my junior year, I went to Paris. I was really glad to be able to communicate. It would have been scary if I couldn't!"

In addition to French, four levels were offered in German and Spanish, however, due to insufficient enrollment, German buffs were forced to commute to the Mid-High to practice their Aufwiedersehn's and Guten tag's. Latin was offered on two levels. Latin students found that this course helped them in chemistry, biology, physics, and yes, even English.

to improve skills

They thought they knew how to get it out. After a while they had a machine to produce it. Over time we learned and probably we will get it better and then we will be happy. Very often the machine will not work. It will not work if it is not good. They who's whom's their goods are the well's of the world. It is the well's we have got and then we are. And then we may be the well's.

The first group of students who opted for the English subject, some explored the wonders of Twain and Faulkner, studied his gritty, gritty American landscape and different kinds of human condition. A number of students were interested in the history and the human aspects of the American and European literature. Many others opted to take Literature of the Old Testament / John Milton, Literary Drama (Great American Novel) and English and all levels of writing, and Great Books and their impact on the world. A few students, who did not have a strong background in English, opted for the challenge of Advanced Placement English, a year-long challenge in English literature.

How many did have we done if skipped, the headlines tipped through the net and then spread right to the families or watched, a commercial and then bought the product without really knowing why.

After a semester of particular hard work, students found that these habits had changed. They learned to appreciate the hard work, time and effort put in the production of a newspaper. They discovered advertising technique and propaganda and studied writing for magazines and newspapers. Some even contributed to the Barker Staff.

Into the far reaches

From entomology to atoms, animal phylums to the earth's core, even out into space with the novas and dwarfs the science classes covered the far reaches of human knowledge.

For the star gazers there was astronomy, a semester class which boasted of its own planetarium that could recreate the night sky from anywhere on earth at any time of the year. The young astronomers also learned about astrophotography and spent many nights simply tracking constellations.

Geology students crushed through stone and mantle while struggling to pronounce important terms such as pyroxene and intrusive.

Of course there were plenty of scalpels and dissecting trays for the zoology student as Mrs. Robin Holland dished out everything from sea urchins to crow dads.

In chemistry, atoms were unleashed. Christmas suckers were made and some students even made beakers of perfume.

There was even a class strictly about insects, the smaller of life's "creepy crawlies." With nets in hand the students made a collection of the world's winning race.

All of the science courses guaranteed a good time, a good deal of study and a better education.

From the beginning you were taught that $2 + 2 = 4$. But as you grew older you began to realize it was not that easy. Add an exponent, a power, a couple of parenthesis and it's a whole new ball game.

The pitches varied from Algebra I to Geometry, a quick slide ball, Algebra II and a real knuckler Trigonometry/Algebra III. There were some curve balls such as Computer Science, and then there was the killer, Calculus. It was a real head spinner!

Your eyes often grew very tired of watching the overhead as the ninth inning rolled around. Finding the gusto to get up and "charge" into the high score of homework was not always a "pitchable" task.

DETERMINED TO SCORE with this shot, Bill Poole gives a look that could kill as a game of volleyball is played during P.E. Standing by is Amy Ledbetter to return the shot if Bill's determination doesn't score this time.

Preparation of show, techniques of game, begin with warm ups

Living next to the high school, many awake each morning to what may have sounded like a riot in their front yard. Actually, there was no riot or mob forming on the football practice field. It was the band preparing for another extravagant performance.

The band gave it their all, providing Edmond with naturally superior performances. As the Bulldog fans experienced a different show at almost every game, however, the band in turn received a few surprises. The band opened their marching season with two new smiling faces. These two outstanding new comers happened to be the new marching directors. With them they brought new marching fundamentals and enough enthusiasm to fill the band with the determination needed to succeed.

Preparing each morning for another hour and a half of jumping jacks, grueling backbends, constant show rehearsals, and everyone's favorite "little circles", the band had only one response: "IS THERE LIFE AFTER 7:00 A.M.?"

According to Amy Ledbetter, life started at 8:00 a.m. Amy gave her life style a new twist when she switched from band to P.E. She still showed up for school in her grubbies, and still got hot and tired, but she did so an hour later. To some, (P.E. instructors in particular), starting off the day with a lap around the track sounds like a barrel of fun, but most will agree that it wrecks havoc with the hairstyle for that day.

Running around the track was only one of the activities that planned by zealous coaches fell under the category of "healthy fun". Many muscle building, figure firming exercises were performed each day. The girls and boys classes competed against each other in soccer and volleyball.

On rare occasions, the boys joined the girls for an aerobic dance session. It's still exercise puffs one girl, but at least it's to a beat!

TALKING IT OVER and discussing problems in the marching drill drummer, Tapan Smith and Kevin Janda find it also a good time to lighten their load and relax during early morning band practice.

THERE FOR A WHILE so making themselves comfortable, Randy Roach and Sam Harris stand by waiting for their next move.

THINKING ABOUT IT considering it and accepting it, Jo Anderson goes over the last routine before another is explained. A lot has to be accomplished during each morning of band so slow moments have to be spent remembering moves.

Singing, swinging, sewing, demand creative students

"Music Department"

Into those two words a vast display of talent, hard work and love pulsed strong.

It consisted of Applied Vocal Music (Act II), Mixed Chorus I and II and Girls Chorus, and it provided Edmond High with one of the best sounds in the state.

Act II was pure entertainment. The student who survived the auditions was in for the time of his life. He was taught strong singing skills, basic stage directions and choreography. Together with Musical Theatre, Act II presented the Follies, a musical variety show.

Mixed chorus was for students with previous singing experience and a healthy desire to perform. The class traveled far and wide to contests and public performances.

Both Mixed Chorus and Girls Chorus studied the style and form of music. Each student tried to improve and hone his or her own musical skills.

They were searching for a sound like slick silver and warm beads of sunlight. The music students opened up their hearts and lungs to give birth to a new sound and a winning voice.

Adjusting to the times is probably one of the harder things to do in life. But the task becomes easier with the help of the Home Economics courses offered.

They covered a wide field of learning and each was designed to help the growing adult cope with the outside world.

Adult Living, a new class, was designed especially to teach students how to make decisions, use their values, and deal with peer pressure and their own sexuality. It also dealt with death, family financing and problems such as divorce.

Another class designed for the single adult was Single Survival. It explained basic clothing and cooking skills and how to wash, dry, iron, repair clothes.

The future chefs of America had a ball in Gourmet Foods. It was a top notch course that dealt with various foods and exotic dishes. It also pointed out current trends for entertaining.

Creative Clothing students studied all types of clothing construction, as well as wardrobe planning and grooming.

All the Home-Ec classes provided students with a practical approach to today's society and explored the changing roles of men and women.

IN SINGLE SURVIVAL, the right stitches construct the right fit. Mike Dransby concentrates primarily on sewing a pair of pants correctly.

LEARNING TO SURVIVE ON HIS OWN, David Taylor discovers he can sew in single survival.

FOODS CLASS INVOLVES MORE than preparing and cooking meals. Students have to understand the importance of nutrition as well. Mrs. Maria Swift assists a student in finding answers for a worksheet.

HITTING THAT NOTE demands great concentration. Chris the Barker, Kelly Lancaster and Amy Brewer strain to hold it long enough.

PRACTICE, PRACTICE, PRACTICE is necessary to perfect style in song. Mr. Terry Ardebary demands perfection from Laura Webster.

Calculators click creativity cascades in business and art

The sounds of clicking calculators and tapping typewriter keys were familiar to students attending business classes: Business Math, Record Keeping, and Accounting I. Accounting students struggled with debits and credits, Office Practice and Vocational Office Education I and II students broke their fingernails and their backs laboring over the keyboard. Marketing students became practiced at the art of buying and selling, Distributive Education students learned to deal with employers and employees, and Business Law students learned to deal with nosy neighbors and their unruly rosebushes. Speedwriting and shorthand students learned to hurry. Most of us, familiar at one time or another with the experience of rolling in from lunch to the tune of the tardy bell, could have benefited from a class like that.

Their hands were often stained with paint and ink, their fingernails soiled with clay, their eyes strained from drawing tiny detail. They were the art students, and their abounding creativity was astonishing to us all.

Ceramics students learned basic techniques of hand built and thrown clay forms. Design I students studied dimensions and relationships found in organic, geometric, and man-made forms, and Painting I students practiced techniques in watercolor, acrylics and mixed medium. Art and photography developed the students' understanding of the visual and psychological aspects of art and design. Art and science emphasized the application of design principles to the overall environment. Studio Art, the only full year art class, was designed specifically for seniors with a desire to work independently on projects in a selected media of their choice.

CLAY WHIZZING IN FROM OF HIM. Randy Giltum enjoys the creative juices that start flowing in Ceramics.

THERE IS NO JOKING IN THE FACE OF STEVE BUTLER as he concentrates on his drawing. Every form of the Art courses have a deep meaning for the students.

Time and patience training and skill lead to a career

What better way to eliminate twenty to thirty hours of college credit and receive three high school credits at the same time than through Vo-Tech, an extensive vocational training course that allowed students to expand their interests and pursue an education in their desired field while still in high school.

"It really helps," stated Stephanie Fikes. "It gives you detailed training in any kind of field you are interested in."

Some Vo-Tech students attended Francis Tuttle, the new Vo-Tech building outside Edmond, while others drove to Oklahoma City for their classes.

The last nine weeks period of the school year, the students were given a chance to experience their future careers by taking actual jobs to polish their training.

PROPPING BACK — The Vo-Tech students at Francis Tuttle are learning the art of propping back, a technique used in the construction industry. They are learning the technique by propping back a wall.

Their faces were familiar. We saw them in the halls, at the football games, and from time to time, behind their desks. The presence of our administrators was constant, but their purpose was a little confusing. Why, exactly, were they there?

For Mr. Sam Winn, principal, that seemed at times to be the answer in itself. Being "there" at every event, keeping everything in order and under control, was a very important part of his job . . . and no small task when dealing with 1300 rowdy juniors and seniors.

The addition of a new attendance policy which required that students must be present 86% of the school year in order to receive credit for a course, kept Mr. James Williams and Mr. Vernon Ebert, vice-principals, busy. They were responsible for presiding over the "court" that decided whether a student would be allowed to receive a credit for a course.

Administrators look forward to hobbies, time out of school

Believe it or not, administrators are people too, with special interests all their own. While we were four wheeling, going to movies, and cruising Broadway, our administrators were busy pursuing their own projects.

Mr. Sam Winn, principal, spent any time he could find away from school carving ducks. "It's a good way to relax," said Mr. Winn. While he "whittled" away his time, Mr. Vernon Ebert, vice-principal, could be found plowing, sowing a crop, and driving his tractor. "I like it because it's a change of pace and helps me forget school problems," he stated.

As Mr. Ebert found mental release in the fields, Mr. James Williams, also a vice-principal, pounded out his frustrations by pursuing a carpentry hobby. Carpentry is relaxing and therapeutic. As Mr. Williams chose to put it, "I'd rather pound on nails than kids."

FARMING IS A WAY of getting away from it all for Mr. Vernon Ebert, vice principal. Feeding hay to his cattle is one of his many after school duties.

School staff shows they have Dog spirit and energetic snap

The entire student body exhibited a tremendous amount of spirit. The juniors and seniors competed fiercely in hall decoration floor, and "yell" competitions during home coming week, and they united at football games to cheer the 'Dogs on to victory after victory. But the spirit didn't stop there. The faculty proved that they, too, were true Bulldogs.

Ms. Gayla McQuig, English teacher and one of four Pep Club sponsors, attended all the football games and was as supportive of the team as any student.

During Howdy week, student council sponsored Airport Day. Students were asked to dress like tourists, and the movie "Airplane" was shown that night. Although not many students participated in dressing up, Mr. Dub Leathers, Math teacher, sported an airline pilot's uniform, and Mrs. Judy Hentges, V.P. secretary, dressed like a nun, imitating a character from "Airplane".

"Over the hill" gang celebrates rites of passage at assembly

Birthdays are no small thing at the high school, especially when they come in groups of three. Mrs. Becky Teague, Mrs. Jean Adams, and Coach Jon Lantz celebrated their 30th birthdays in the fall of '82 and were not forgotten by the juniors and seniors of Edmond High School.

Mrs. Adams and Mrs. Teague, both Chemistry teachers, were recognized by the student body at an assembly. Finding space for students, textbooks presents problems

Space was not only a problem when trying to place students in classrooms, but with storage areas also.

The English and History departments both had trouble finding room enough to store all their textbooks and other materials. Teachers were forced by the overcrowded situation to use their closets. It seemed that everytime a teacher opened their closet, textbooks, papers and assorted items came tumbling out onto the floor. The teachers felt a lot like the students who were assigned the new short lockers - cramped.

The classrooms were also crowded with students being placed in the cafeteria and the auditorium classrooms. Some teachers even had to share their rooms with a "traveling" teacher.

The Edmond citizens voted bond money for more school improvements, and plans were made to add on to the high school.

Seniors encourage energetic spirit

It takes time, energy, and a lot of love to be a sponsor, especially a Senior class sponsor. Since this is their last year at EHS, the Seniors always strive to make the most of every moment. It is the class sponsors who must deal with this unbounding enthusiasm.

For these sixteen teachers, there is not enough time in the day and sometimes, not enough patience in the world. They have the delicate task of molding wild dreams into practical plans. Together, the Senior Class sponsors teach the students, through experience how to take the idea, draw up a plan, set that plan into action, and how to follow up to the very last detail. All of this must be achieved with a careful hand suggesting, not telling, small nudges in the right direction.

Each of the sponsors has a different reason for being a sponsor. Each has a varied set of emotions about it. Yet all must admit that it goes down to the basics of being a teacher: the desire to educate the youth.

Mr. Steve Morris puts it this way, "Teaching is more than book work. It is social values and humanity too."

That is what clubs and organizations are all about, reaching the teenagers today how to deal with the adults of tomorrow. If that job takes three hours a week or 20 hours a week, then that is what it will be. For to these teachers there is nothing more important than giving today's youth the very best education and social values possible. Several outstanding students take this to heart. They are the Senior Class officers. It is their duty to represent the student body and give voice to their feelings. These students are very special and they too spend many hours to make the school year the best.

Senior Class Officers: Ricky Dearborn, President; Wendy Schilling, Treasurer; Alane Freund, Secretary; Susan Combs, School Board Rep.; John Watson, Vice-President.

RAISING HIS HAT to the crowd, Jimmy Dunn poses as a scholarly bulldog. Seniors exerted time and effort to produce an outstanding float.

Daredevils risk lives for chills, thrills, fun

The thrill and excitement of danger is a unique and for at least three members of the senior class and faculty, irresistible force.

Mark Diechler gets "high" literally on skydiving. He took his first dive on his sixteenth birthday. Mark recalled one incident, in which his parachute collided with a friend's, that could have discouraged a less committed skydiver. Mark, however, borrowed a parachute from a friend, and ten minutes later was back in the clouds. "In fact," Mark quipped with a smile, "it was kind of fun!"

EHRA member Kevin Waddill devotes a large part of his time to Motocross and racing. He volunteers himself to dangerous situations nearly every day on unpredictable dirt trails and race tracks.

Mr. Steve Mathis, senior sponsor, is a devout hang gliding enthusiast in his spare time. He once had a close call when he flew too close to a brewing storm. He dove to the ground, followed only minutes later by a torrent of rain. He describes the incident as very exciting and "bordering on scary."

"THE FLYINGEST FLYING THERE IS" was the Reader's Digest article that first sparked Mr. Steve Mathis' interest in hang gliding in 1973. Soaring high above the ground on his Ultralight Products "Comet," he describes the feeling as "three dimensional . . . incredibly free."

FLYING HIGH Above Dixie's "Teeing," Mark Diechler beams with excitement. "I feel the adrenaline pumping and I get real excited to exit the aircraft," says Mark, describing his pre-jump anticipation.

VERSATILITY IS APPARENT as Kevin Waddill exhibits his skill in motocross and racing.

Girl, 2, Hops Jet—Nearly

By Mary Jo Nelson

2-year-old Oklahoma girl decided to hop a jet for Los Angeles tonight — and made it.

Winsome heroine in the adventure was Julie Niemeyer, only granddaughter of District Attorney and Mrs. Charles P. Harris.

It was something like Julie's sixth trip to Wil Rogers World Airport to send off departing helid.

They kept asking,

"Don't you want to come with us?" but they were ignored through.

Monday night, she and Grandma took Mrs.

Charles Harris, Long Beach, Calif., to her plane and Julie squirmed her way into the crowd and vanished.

After a frantic hunt, Julie was found in a plane seat ready for the trip. She refused to leave. Grandmother coaxed and pleaded.

"I'm going to California," she replied.

But Julie was carried protesting from the plane, before its doors

By this time, Harris was getting into a lather back at home. The plane was running an hour late and the hamburger stop brought another delay.

"I was about ready to call out the police," Harris said, when the two drove in.

Julie has been staying with her grandparents lately, while her two older brothers have the chicken pox.

The district attorney insisted Tuesday she's getting "only a little" spoiled. But he confessed he plans to take her for her first plane flight one day soon.

If a dollar a day could pay the way

From Franklin to Jackson to Lincoln to Washington, as the bills they are on decrease in value so the number of such bills decreased in student's pocketbook.

The list of senior expenditures could have literally rolled off into the horizon.

Clothes, trips, fast food, gas, shoes, socks, polos and purses, club dues, portrait bills, tux, formal gowns, senior breakfast tickets, make-up, cologne, perfume, spirit ribbons, concert costs, tapes and cassettes, cap and gown rental insurance, mini skirts, head bands, stereos, video games, MGMS from Honor Society, Gummy Bears from German Club, "I love senior" buttons, t-shirts and yearbooks, too, these are just a few minor items which seniors must have! There were a handful of "extras" such as: Bulldog shoe strings, rainbow stickers, ice cream bars, soap, toilet paper, and shoe polish, party refreshments, new cars, repair and upkeep for the new car, hair permanents, contact lenses, new retainers to replace old ones, and other assorted odds and ends.

For every dollar earned there are fifty different ways to spend it. It is almost a frantic attempt to live it up before leaving it behind.

Quick! Hurry! Experience all the life you can while you are still free to do so!

The price of being a senior is not only in monetary terms, it is deeper than that. It is an emotional encounter with adulthood.

Dedication to your craft is hard work

The work was hard and the hours were long but the Edmond students who went said that it was well worth every ounce of energy.

The Oklahoma Summer Arts Institute is held annually at Quartz Mountain Resort. The two week program is for outstanding teenagers in a variety of art forms.

Barbie Ball, Shannon Brown, Darry Carlstone and Andrea Nanny are four Edmond seniors who attended this summer. And they all come back with positive remarks.

Barbie, who went as a photography student, said that "it really taught you to use your head."

Shannon, Darry, and Andrea were each in the orchestra. They practiced an average of eight hours a day which always left its mark of muscle fatigue.

All of the students made lifetime friends and each expressed the desire to continue in their field with a more serious attitude.

THE OKLAHOMA SUMMER ARTS INSTITUTE was a great learning experience, explains Shannon Brown. "It gave me a chance to work closely with professional conductors and musicians. I learned a lot about my instrument and playing in an orchestra. It was hard work and a real test of dedication but would be more than willing to experience it again anyday."

"A LOT OF HARD WORK," was Darry Carlstone's first comment on the institute. "but the teachers were the best in the entire area and the guest conductors were the best in the country!"

Ambitious farmers go to Washington

Going to workshops to learn about leadership may sound a little less than exciting, but if it means going to Washington D.C. to attend the FFA National Leadership Training Conference maybe it would be tolerable.

Two of the FFA senior officers, Tim Roberts and Jim Hafer, had the opportunity to attend the conference during the summer. The boys raised most of the 1,200 dollars needed to make the trip themselves, and they found it to be worth every penny. "It changed my attitude," stated Tim. "It made me want to work to help our chapter. We learned a lot . . . It was great."

The boys attended conferences, workshops and lectures with devotion for the first four days of the week-long trip. The last three days were spent touring Washington and joining in the Fourth of July festivities, along with a multitude of other tourists and resident Washingtonites. Tim and Jim learned a lot, and both agreed that they would like to return some day.

DURING THEIR TRIP TO WASHINGTON, Tim Roberts and Jim Hafer meet and talk with Senator David Duren.

FFA MEMBERS from all over the USA attend the workshop. Part of the program is touring Washington sites such as Arlington National Cemetery.

Part-time working big time spending

For the money and to be happy is Kaitlyn Cullen's busy explanation of why she works. It was a large override of the "work-syn-drome" Edmund Spenser had a message to spread and for devism, as a lot of money. No more, whether it was the prep school. Why in New wave the cost of everything climbed higher and higher. Spence worked long nights in order to afford everything they had let their hearts on.

Yet other students had different reasoning when asked why they work. Don't like to say it. Sometimes they need the money like right now because of my new car, but mostly it's because I like to see people. Saw the explanation Marius Grant gave for bartending. A hunch the most common reason was presented by Kristi Buck. I need the money for clothes, gas, and senior expenses.

The Senior held a variety of jobs. From veterinary assistant to check a horse trailer to secretary to waitress.

Working may not always make the teenager happy when it conflicts with other activities, but the feeling of money in your pocket is hard to beat.

They are not so different after all

America is not the free and home of the brave, or so we say. How do other countries think? How do they feel about the good old USA?

Patricia Diaz says that her country, Colombia, really respects the United States.

The other foreign exchange students, Anna Hemir, Maria Kure, and Patricia Diaz, had similar things to say. The respect was one of the main reasons they chose to go overseas year abroad here in America.

When asked some of the differences between our country and theirs, Anna from Sweden and Patricia from Norway said that there were few major differences. Although they do not have coffee or required citizenship, the basic form of a teenager's life are the same.

They have extremely high tax rates, yet there are benefits from the high taxation. A college expenses and hospital care is provided for free by the government.

One major difference they noted was that most teenagers here have their own car. Anna explained that in Denmark it is $75,000 for a Camaro.

Yet despite enormous differences, on virtually every item, the social life of people in other countries does not appear to be extremely different from that of American citizens.

After all, it is one people, one planet.

Junior leaders set pace and example

The Class of Eighty-four proved to be a very spirited group of young people. The class officers took an enthusiastic part in all school activities and they helped to draw a large percentage of the junior student body to games and dances. The junior class seemed to almost bloom under the more mature atmosphere of the high school.

A substantial portion of the credit for the junior spirit goes to the class sponsors. These teachers put in a lot of time and effort to make the junior dreams come true. It was because of this combined effort that the juniors won the Homecoming float contest.

All of this terrific energy on the part of the officers and sponsors helped to set the pace for the entire junior student body.

MR. AND MRS. JUNIOR BULLDOG let the Bubbling soaps intrigue viewers

The 10:55 a.m. bell rings and they're off! Coats half on and papers stuck carelessly in battered folders, they have one thing on their minds: making it to the nearest television set before Hope makes her big decision or Tony pops the big question.

Believe it or not, students actually went home or to a restaurant where there was a TV set in order to keep up with the daily heart breaks and triumphs of their favorite soap operas. The soap opera epidemic swept through the school and struck many unwitting victims with the urge to "tune in" at a certain time each day.

"I used to go to Sammy's for lunch and watch 'All My Children' on their TV," confessed soap addict Anna Tozz.

"I don't have early lunch, otherwise I'd go home and watch 'All My Children,'" added Veronica Colon.

The popularity of soaps, and "All My Children" in particular, even tripped a few of the male gender. "If I get a chance, I watch 'All My Children,'" stated one of the closer watchers, Ralph Conrad.

"Whenever I'm at home I watch 'All My Children' and the one with all the doctors, 'General Hospital,'" admitted Dan Gordon.

Where there's a will there's a way. The fact that most soaps appeared during school didn't seem to squelch the appetites of truly devoted fans, who somehow managed to keep up with their favorite on-going saga.

TUNING IN: The school's soap opera fans are always tuned in to the latest developments in the lives of their favorite characters.

Taking a "Close-up" look at D.C.

How would you like to see the Washington Monument, visit the Lincoln Memorial or may be even stroll through the White House? How about a visit to the Smithsonian museum, a talk with a legislator, or a tour of the United States Capitol Building?

A group of about 48 students was given this opportunity through the "Close-Up D.C." program. April 10-16, they spent an exciting week touring our nation's capital, Washington, D.C.

The plans for this trip were set back in October. The trip cost approximately $736 for each student. With no time to spare, money raising began to help pay for some of the cost. At Christmas time, fruitcakes, spices, stuffed animals, and ceramic trivets were sold.

Several students had their own ideas as to what the trip meant to them.

"To me CU in D.C. meant having the chance to learn about how our government works and how I fit into the picture. To me, Close-Up meant interaction... interaction of young people," said Scott Srawski.

"I wanted to meet people from different parts of the United States. I'm always looking for new experiences, and I saw this trip as something new. Plus, I had never been out east before," added Greg McKinnis.

"I wanted to go to Washington to have fun and to meet other people. I also want to be able to learn more about our government," said Sara Davenport.

"The trip to D.C. gave us all a chance to meet new people from other states, while learning about our country's government," said Camella Lopez.

CUDDLY STUFFED ANIMALS were one of the several items that kids sold to raise money for the D.C. trip. Shawn Griffey poses with his snuggly selection of furry critter.

"CU IN DC" was a phrase that became just about as familiar as "I'm hungry" or "clean your room." The signs that were subtle reminders of the upcoming trip.

Animals exhibit unusual habits

From the most experienced riders, and ordinary household every person, the owner's eye, every day is that every horse could be ridden down. The very best of the breed, like it or not, and as with the same ones, that speed is really, and amused (but loving) laughter.

Allen Snyder's poodle, "Whisper," was found dead when Allen was 10 years old.

Valley girl look totally awesome

Virtually no one escaped it. Almost every one's vocabulary was expanded to include "Totally!" and "Gag me with a spoon!" Although there were, for obvious geographic reasons, few true Valley Girls attending classes in Edmond, the fun, silly lingo from southern California plagued our conversation.

Valley Girl, a term originated to describe girls of the California Valley area who usually attended Valley High, was soon adapted to include anyone who spoke this crazy version of the English language with any regularity.

When a Valley Girl found something especially disgusting or offensive, she would usually express herself with a heartfelt "gross me out the door!" Describing a boy she did not like, much far, a Valley Girl might exclaim "gag me out!" or "bag that face!"

Subjects that met with a Valley Girl's approval (such as Rick Springfield or an all day shopping spree at, like, the mall) were held at "Totally awesome!"

When it came to diets, Valley Girls were very strict. On Monday they would eat absolutely nothing. By the middle of the week they were hungry enough to spurge on a head of lettuce and a roll of sugarless mints. By Saturday they would, in their famished state of delirium, scarf a pint of Hoegaarden beer, a late-Chocolate Chip ice cream and a Sara Lee Cheesecake. This binge led, of course, to a strict fast on Monday.

This extremity was, however, only the case of a true California Valley Girl. Most Edmond "spin-offs" stuck to the more conservative Valley Girl customs, interjecting "like" a least five times in every spoken sentence and maybe, just maybe, driving a VW Rabbit.

SNOW IS ONE EXPERIENCE that a California Valley Girl may never live to see. Dawn Frankfurt and Tina Jordan dressed in trendy Valley girl styles, take advantage of a snowy day and have a totally awesome time.

Exchange students provide contrast

Can you imagine walking down the hall of a high school in Mexico, or sitting in a history class in Denmark? How about riding a bus to school in Norway? Or maybe taking an English class in the United States? Well, we can sit in an English class here in Edmond anytime, but for a group of exchange students, it has proven to be quite a new experience.

This year Edmond has hosted ten foreign exchange students. The exchange program has brought these teenagers to the United States, providing an exciting and rewarding experience.

Exchange programs offer a high school student the opportunity to experience the challenges and adventures of a foreign school year in a foreign country. As a result, students who didn't leave mommy and daddy behind for a year, summer exchange programs are offered too.

All the students have had to adjust to different things since they've been here. For some of them it has been here for the first time. It has been learning to speak better English, and for others it has been the challenge of making new friends.

"It has been hard for me because my language is Spanish," says Maru Cordero from Mexico.

"I like the way people are so friendly," says Elisabeth Melhus from Sweden.

"I'm a very quiet person and it takes me a little while to make friends," says Patricia Diaz from Argentina.

The students that have come to Edmond this year have not only come for the new experience, but to make new friends, to see the world, and have lots of fun.

He chuckles smugly at the old photograph of his dad in a slicked back, impeccably groomed ducktail. There's no way, he thinks to himself with confidence, that I'll ever be that ridiculous over my hair! I mean it's just something to keep my ears warm! But as he runs his fingers through his own punk hairdo, a flush rises to his face. Panic. It's gotten a fraction too long on top, and the sides are actually beginning to touch the tops of his ears. Why, this could ruin my whole look, my whole image.

It's true. The time and effort we spent keeping our hair well-groomed will probably inspire giggles from our own kids in years to come. Perhaps one of the most tedious cuts to keep in perfect order was the "punk" cut, short on top, cut back past the ears, and longer in the back. This "unsex" hairdo was popular for girls and boys alike.

The "GQ" look gave boys a definite look of class and good taste. This short, neat style was a natural with classic, "preppy" clothes.

French braiding kept girls' hair tidy and added a romantic, feminine touch to their overall appearance.

All the popular styles for girls and boys had one thing in common: clean lines and simple, neat styles. These factors dominated hair fashion, and summed up the general attitude of good grooming.

A BIT OF APPREHENSION Junior Edmond is in a teen's mind as he watches his dad trim the hair on his pony.

PUNK IS WHERE IT'S AT For Jose, it's a hairdo that shows off his long hair in the back, and he's proud of the popular, trendy haircut.

PERFECTLY COIFFED Anna greets us confidently while her hair dresser tucks up her hair with a comb. Anna, like many other Edmond students, had the look of Superhero in her hair.

Juniors: excelled and exceptional

Several classes that are generally considered senior territory because of their demanding academic qualifications were sprinkled with ambitious juniors who run for their money and prove themselves with a broader educational background than college duties.

Not only did juniors attend advanced classes but in many cases excelled beyond the respect of their seniors. Using the same respect and the approval of the course teacher.

Physical teacher Steve Morris said the juniors that are the challenge of his physical education are exceptional. A junior who has the self confidence and intelligence to take on an advanced course more than likely will have what it takes to make it through the class with flying colors.

Junda Schiedt and Steve Gentry are two juniors that had what Morris said were exceptional supporting Mr. Morris's physical education.

Trigonometry attracted a lot of juniors among them Marcy Jones, Craig, and Robert Lowrey, and Amy Endrizal. Craig and Amy were also in advanced chemistry.

Todd Faulkner was given the privilege of enrolling in Television Production, a class generally offered only to seniors.

PENCIL FLYING Eunice Park was a junior who was having a problem with what she hopes is a senior's problem.

CALCULATORS AND PLENTY OF PAPER a junior who was having a problem with what she hopes is a senior's problem.

Tears, cheers escort years end

The end of the year has a way of washing over a person, a strange mix of sadness and joy. It was a night of reflection, a time to look back on the year that had just passed. We were all so tired, but we were also so happy. It was a night of tears and cheers, a night of goodbyes and hello's.

We suddenly felt ripped from our homes, from the lives we had built. We had lived so hard, we had tried so hard, and now it was time to say goodbye. We were all so tired, but we were also so happy. It was a night of tears and cheers, a night of goodbyes and hello's.

Yet despite our sadness, we were also so happy. We had lived so hard, we had tried so hard, and now it was time to say goodbye. We were all so tired, but we were also so happy. It was a night of tears and cheers, a night of goodbyes and hello's.

Confronting the road less traveled

The end of the year came around, and with it came relief, a few tests, and a lot of important, mind-blowing decisions. The forked road we faced offered a multitude of choices, and with more than a little confusion, we chose a path.

For many of us the path led to college. The campuses of CU and OSU gained many Edmond students. Some of us chose to stay at home and attend CSU while others traveled the way to places such as Arizona or Vermont for our education.

College, however, was not the only choice available. Some graduating students, especially those interested in ROTC in high school, found appeal in the armed services. They were able, through the Army, Navy, Air Force, or Marines, to see the country or the world while making a living and acquiring training in a variety of fields.

Making a living, was, in fact, another dominant choice. Some students, because of their preparation in Voc-tech or experience of holding a job while in high school, had the opportunity to start supporting themselves immediately.

In some cases, supporting a family as well, was in order. Marriage right after high school was the answer for a few of us, and along with it came the responsibilities and obligations that make maturity inevitable.

Somehow, we all managed to make a choice that suited us, struggling in the murky area between "teenagers" and "young adults" and uncertain about where our chosen paths would lead. These decisions were scary. But, with the advice of our parents and teachers to fall back on, we started on the long journey to the rest of our lives.

CHECKING HIS WATCH against the Central State university clock, John Humphrey, senior, finds time to go.

VOWING TO LOVE, HONOR, AND CHERISH, several couples found marriage to be one of the options after high school.

ALONG WITH AN INCREASING NUMBER OF YOUNG PEOPLE TODAY, Terry Dechard finds allure in the prospect of a position in the Armed Service.

I have been thinking of you a great deal lately and wondering how you are getting on. I hope you are well and happy. I have been very busy lately, but I will try to write to you more often.
 I am sure you will understand. I am ever your affectionate friend,
 John Doe

The 1983 Bulldog was published by the yearbook staff of Edmond Memorial High School and printed by the American Yearbook Company of Topeka, Kansas. It is printed on 80 lb. Matte paper. Body type is 10 pt. Serif Gothic, outlines are 8 pt. Serif Gothic, and headlines are 24 pt. Serif Gothic and Serif Gothic Bold. Division page headlines were 42 pt. Ronda and division page copy was 12 pt. Serif Gothic.

The cover is nighthawk alligator. End sheets are gray with blind embossing. The book is 9 x 12 and contains 208 pages. 1000 copies were sold.

For their help in producing this volume, the staff is indebted to the following people: Mrs. Louanne Ward Trueblood, American Yearbook representative, Mr. R.J. Wagner and employees of Wagners Studios Rick Whirman

We also acknowledge our indebtedness to the faculty and administration of Edmond Memorial High School for their help in many areas.

The staff of the 1983 Bulldog consisted of Shelly Dawdy and Jeff Weiss co-editors, Kelly Anderson, Cathy Corken, Amanda Goza, Berry Hunt, Linda Kudy, Jill McCoy, and Nikki Presley, assistant editors, Barbie Ball, Robin Chase, and Cheryl Wallace, photography editors, Mark Diechler, Phil Every, Lanny Haynes, Tim Roberts, and Kevin Waddill, photographers. Other staff members were Molly Dressler, Teresa Burroughs, Chris Fuller, Jamie Fowler, Cindy Hastie, Erika House, Richard Huff, Amy Ledbetter, Jeff Lisren, Stefanie Nance, Jenny Reese, Wendy Schilling, Georgia Stratton, and Ms. Robin J. Hey Miss Take another year to be perfect & I still can't believe we had the exact schedule we had one class. It's been fun for Piggys class. Stealing donuts & then getting caught by the girl who has the baby (that bitch) Well Miss it's a shame you'll be big ass
I wish the best the school it will be over the couple. Enjoy your new home
Have a best in life and you move in. I'll Hardy, hell of a Summer party
Ya Ya
